The purpose of the author in writing this book is, not only to trace the rise and fall of a famous house, but to separate the facts from the fables in its history and in the history of events that touch the house. At the period of the American Revolution there was but little education among the common people. Copies of company rosters show that a surprising percentage of the rank and file, even in the New England regiments, signed their names with a cross, and of course a still larger number were unable to read. Official orders signed by field officers were sometimes marvels of illiteracy. There were few books, and these were mostly religious books, and books containing stories for the young, which, if not true, the authors had a prayerful conviction ought to be true. Such conditions were not very promising...
